Luen Thai Holdings and Natural Beauty Bio-Technology are two of the consumer staple stocks I have identified as undervalued. This means their current share prices are trading at levels less than what the companies are actually worth. Investors can benefit from buying these companies while they are discounted, because they gain when the market prices move towards the stocks' true values. Below is a list of stocks I've compiled that are deemed undervalued based on the latest financial data.

Luen Thai Holdings Limited (SEHK:311)

Luen Thai Holdings Limited, an investment holding company, manufactures apparels and accessories in the People's Republic of China, the United States, Europe, Japan, Canada, and internationally. Formed in 1983, and run by CEO Cho Lung Tan, the company now has 30,000 employees and with the company's market capitalisation at HKD HK$1.16B, we can put it in the small-cap stocks category.

311's shares are now floating at around -78% below its true level of $4.99, at a price tag of HK$1.12, according to my discounted cash flow model. The divergence signals an opportunity to buy 311 shares at a low price. 311 is also a financially robust company, as current assets can cover liabilities in the near term and over the long run. ### Natural Beauty Bio-Technology Limited (SEHK:157)

Natural Beauty Bio-Technology Limited, an investment holding company, manufactures and sells skin care, beauty, aroma-therapeutic, and health supplements and make-up products under the Natural Beauty brand. Formed in 1976, and run by CEO Wen-Chung Hsiao, the company now has 540 employees and with the market cap of HKD HK$1.16B, it falls under the small-cap category.

157's shares are now trading at -56% under its real value of $1.31, at the market price of HK$0.58, based on my discounted cash flow model. The discrepancy signals an opportunity to buy low. Additionally, 157's PE ratio is around 11.18x compared to its Personal Products peer level of, 18.82x indicating that relative to its competitors, you can buy 157 for a cheaper price. 157 is also in great financial shape, as current assets can cover liabilities in the near term and over the long run. 157 also has no debt on its balance sheet, which gives it headroom to grow and financial flexibility. ## Tianyun International Holdings Limited (SEHK:6836)

Tianyun International Holdings Limited, an investment holding company, produces and sells processed fruit products; and trades fresh fruits in the People's Republic of China and internationally. Formed in 2003, and now run by Ziyuan Yang, the company employs 650 people and has a market cap of HKD HK$1.25B, putting it in the small-cap group.

6836's shares are currently floating at around -68% under its actual value of ¥4.05, at a price of HK$1.28, based on my discounted cash flow model. This price and value mismatch indicates a potential opportunity to buy the stock at a low price. In addition to this, 6836's PE ratio is around 8.51x against its Food peer level of, 18.58x suggesting that relative to its peers, 6836's shares can be purchased for a lower price. 6836 is also in good financial health, as current assets can cover liabilities in the near term and over the long run.
